Ryan started out in 1997 as General Construction Staff, working with Rich Bravold doing general cleanup and framing and, over time, through focus and a drive for greater things, he gradually moved up the work crew levels of responsibility and into full time construction project management. Rich was an amazing mentor encouraged Ryan to get licensed, even hiring Ryan for project coordination, process, and management, eventually running subdivisions for Rich and subcontracting and general contracting independently.

Ryan is now a fully developed General Contractor with experience specializing in medium and high-end single family and multi-family residential remodels and new construction projects, with project history that includes multi-family rehabilitation, tenant improvement projects, high-end residential remodels and new commercial and residential construction projects. His body of experience includes the initial planning with job specifications and project cost engineering, from simple scope remodels to complex construction projects including project management of residential subdivisions. He has years of: (A) Project coordination with employees, subcontractors, vendors and suppliers, (B) Job completion with final state and lender inspections, cost reconciliations, and project completion documentation, (C) Emphasis on customer satisfaction and quality workmanship while staying on project schedules and within budget, (D) Strong team leadership with employees, subcontractors, suppliers and vendors, and (E) General Specialization in project management of larger scope residential construction projects. When it comes to horizontals and subdivision layout, Ryan is a Critical Team Member to have in the room.
